*I used to think the future would be awesome.
But as I get older I more and more think the past would be awesome.
Now get off my lawn!*
- BR 1 February, 2023
These writers? It's science "FICTION". On their site it officially says "The Modular Body is an online science fiction story" under about. Look up TheModularBody site.
- Ivan 1 February, 2023
OK Yahoo, you need to fact-check your stories, The Modular Body is an online science fiction story about the creation of OSCAR, a living organism built from human cells. All characters are fictional and all videos are CGI. It took me literally 2min to find all information needed so be a responsible
- Brandon V 1 February, 2023
I wish I was not alive for all of this. The 50's were the time to live in.
- x1 1 February, 2023
Just because you can, doesn't mean you should. What fresh horror have you created!?
- DocAirWair 1 February, 2023
*This isn't real.
It's an "Online science fiction story"
You all need to read between the lines*

- Ulatec 1 February, 2023
If anybody played a video game years ago by the name of "Half Life" this article and video should bring back fond memories..
- BradT 3 February, 2023
This can't possibly go wrong in any way. (Just kidding, but seriously, if I can swap out my human donated kidney for a technological/organic one that does the same job and no one else needs surgery, I'm totally down for it).
- iCrush 2 February, 2023
*This has been out for years!! it's fake 😂
 There's even videos explaining how they made these videos*
- Norman 1 February, 2023
..... I bet that they could sell 10 Million of them INSTANTLY if it looks like a 21-year-old Requel Welch and is fully bodily functional!
- Han Solo 3 February, 2023
This is from six years ago. Open the link in YT. WTH? It's also labeled as "science fiction" -- emphasis on the fiction part.
- Marcus Aurelius 3 February, 2023
The Transhumanist Declaration covers situations such as this. The question arises: As the world advances scientifically, is it advancing ethically, legally, socially, culturally, and morally to the same extent?
- Josiah 1 February, 2023
Transhumanism at its "finest" I guess?
- anonymouse 1 February, 2023
If it isn't alive according to medical & legal definitions, can it be murdered? Can it be guilty of a crime itself?
- Marcus 2 February, 2023
Fake Journalism here folks. This is from a movie. Oscar is CGI, it looks very real though. We're not there yet in technology.

- Dennis 2 February, 2023
If this were real it would be a bit terrifying...
- DragonKnight 1 February, 2023
*Doesn't this sound like synths from FO4?
Pretty soon people will disappear and be replaced by these.
This really begs the question, even though they can, should they?*
- stan 2 February, 2023
this will be used to give everyone 12-inch dongs. i guarantee it.
- Brian 2 February, 2023
Avatars for Nephilim. Great work guys.
- Marcman 1 February, 2023
The first steps to a cybernetic organism. What a time to be alive.

- Green 2 February, 2023
We can't make reliable organs from stem cells yet (or the organ transplant problem would be solved by now), and if we could, you would have to constantly feed the live tissue to keep the organs alive and functional (I don't see any arteries supplying the poor "brain" with food and oxygen). Not to mention [re]connecting nerves (to activate the lungs in this video) would be a dream for all the paraplegic patients around the world. Plugging fleshy pieces of legos doesn't work just like that. Interesting concept though, even if the imaginary result looks like a chicken ready for the rotisserie...

- Dave 1 February, 2023
You know this is a work of science fiction, right? A few clicks around the website given at the end of the video reveals that it's nothing more than that, science fiction.
- StoneManiac 2 February, 2023
As I watched the video the movie 'Re-Animator' came to mind for some reason.
- anonymouse 1 February, 2023
Some 8 billion organic, non-engineered humans are that much closer to becoming obsolete. That's the good news?
- Stephen Lang 2 February, 2023
Now what if they were to use My cells for this experiment? I can imagine them using them to make a tiny Merman with them and then making a tiny Mermaid companion for Him using the cells of a Female celebrity.
- DM 2 February, 2023
I hope people realize the human body has this inherent natural capability on its own. The right genes just have to be activated. There's no need for this Frankenstein approach.
- Impaler 3 February, 2023
Yeah yeah. It's squirming around "trying to find the optimal temperature". Lol. Should have adjusted the script to say it was writhing in pain because it had no skin.

- Ron 2 February, 2023

Me: "...good morning doctor, I'm here for an upgrade."

- khmer.org 2 February, 2023

French and other dutch country are very smart innovation because they have free education for their people. Next decade they're going to rule the world with their advance high tech. Remember Rocket and Missiles were invented by Germany. Now we see U.S., Russia, and Europe use these rockets to kill other people and explore the space.

- Deadpool 3 February, 2023

I'll let you all in on a little secret. None of it is real. The video is from 6 years ago and the "biologist" is an actor. Just go look it up.

- Beezy 2 February, 2023

How about calling out <https://www.popularmechanics.com/>, because it is their article.*
- Aaron 3 February, 2023
Disgusting. What exactly is the end goal? The only logical end goal is the end of humanity. Why are people doing this?
- Ed 2 February, 2023
